MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Where's What

25X1A9A

1. [REDACTED] author of Where's What, called to inquire if the Agency would be willing to reprint the book he authored while employed in the Office of Security. He identified the reason for his call as stemming from a conversation he has had with Mr. Martin Danzinger, LEAA. He stated that Mr. Danzinger would like to have copies of the book for further distribution but that he has determined that he will be unable to have it published. He suggested that we discuss this problem with Mr. Danzinger.

2. I called Mr. Danzinger today. He related the history of the publication of the book; the fact that he thinks it is an immensely valuable publication for LEAA purposes; and that he needs additional copies for distribution. In relating the history of the book, he included the fact that at one time he was interested in having an unclassified version published. He related that Mr.

[REDACTED] has updated the original publication in a manuscript, which is unclassified. He added that he has been unable to have the new manuscript published but that his purpose could be well served if he had copies of the classified publication available to him. He asked if the Agency would be willing to reprint the classified version, adding that his agency would be willing to reimburse the Central Intelligence Agency for the entire cost of reprinting. He added that he would be willing for the Agency to effect the distribution for him if we preferred.

3. I told Mr. Danzinger that the Central Intelligence Agency is under specific and detailed restraints in its authorization to engage in printing operations; that the restraints are technical; and that I will pursue this matter in the hope of satisfying his request and advise him appropriately. I told him that we would, however, not be interested in distributing the books.

4. I asked Mr. Danzinger how many copies he would need. He stated that as an "offhand" figure he would say 1,000 but that if he is advised that the Agency is willing to engage in the reprinting endeavor he will make a survey and arrive at a definite figure. (Throughout the conversation, we both understood that we were speaking of the classified version of the book now in existence and not the unclassified manuscript.)
